

SPEEDY JUSTICE IN BOY BANDIT CASES.

Young Marx is to be Placed on Trial
This Week.

Other Members of the Gang Feel Very Bitter Toward the Fellow Who Confessed—Another Victim of the Bandits Died Today.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Gustav Marx, the first of the car barn murderers to be arraigned, and whose confession resulted in the running down of the other members of the gang, will be placed on trial this week. Unless a continuance is demanded, which is not likely, Marx will have been convicted and sentenced before another week rolls around.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—The youthful self-confessed murderers and train robbers, Peter Niedermeier, Harvey Van Dahn, Gustav Marx and Emil Roeski, were arraigned in court last night.

Marx pleaded guilty to all the charges against him, but his three companions pleaded not guilty.

During the afternoon the prisoners were removed from the Harrison police station to the county jail, where they will remain until brought to trial.

Shortly after the prisoners were removed to the county jail Marx was confronted with his three accomplices. Marx's confession implicating Van Dahn, Niedermeier and Roeski, was read to the prisoners. The bandits arrested in Indiana refused to confirm or deny the contents of the message. They were then asked to tell whatever more they had to say concerning their career.

"I am willing to hang without the wink of an eye if I see Marx, the squealer, hang first," Van Dahn said. "The same here," Niedermeier added.

"You fellows got no more than you deserve," Marx said. "Some time ago," Marx said to the Inspector of Police, "I met the bunch in New Orleans street, where we intended to rob the American Express wagon and I forgot my large gun.

"This angered the boys and they told me to leave them. I walked away and when fifteen feet away a bullet passed through the brim of my hat. It was fired by one of these fellows. I got revenge."

Niedermeier admitted to the police that he had and Van Dahn had made an attempt to kill Marx. Roeski also said that he had narrowly escaped murder at the hands of his accomplices.

OFFICER

Whom Neidermeier Shot
Died This Morning
at Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—The sacrifice of one more life to car barn murderers was noted this morning when Joseph G. Driscoll, patrol from Sheffield avenue station and one of the officers attempted the capture of the boy bandits in the dugout near Miller's Station, Ind., died at Mercy Hospital from the effect of a pistol shot in the stomach and liver. According to the confession of Neidermeier, Driscoll was wounded by him. Driscoll approached the dugout in what he supposed was a careful manner, using the trees and shrubbery as a protection, but the unerring aim of Neidermeier brought him down. Driscoll leaves a widow and three children.

THREE Believed to Have Perished When the Tugs Collided.

New York, Dec. 1.—The tugs Hercules and Idlewild collided at 5 o'clock this morning off Liberty Island and it is believed that three members of the crew of the Idlewild were drowned. The Idlewild was nearly cut in two by the Hercules and went to the bottom immediately. The cook, fireman and second engineer of the Idlewild have not as yet been accounted for and it is thought they went down with their boat.

HILL Says He Is Not on Earth— Has Nothing to Say.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 1.—The Evening News will today print the following interview sent from Albany, N. Y., by Martin Miller, the Washington correspondent of that paper:

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Hon. David Bennett Hill refused to talk politics last night when the Newark Evening News correspondent visited him at Wolford's Roost.

"Now that Mr. Cleveland has declared himself out," said the correspondent, "has the situation as to presidential candidates changed?"

"I am not of this world," said Mr. Hill.

"Why should possible candidates be so shy at this time? The convention is not many months away."

"I am not on earth," said Mr. Hill.

MR. HOGG'S PURCHASE.

Columbus, Dec. 1.—John M. Hogg of Zanesville yesterday afternoon completed the deal for the purchase of the Ambros property, 59 to 67 South High street, for a consideration of $150,000. The property has been in the possession of the Ambros family since 1812.

FEDERAL

Court Convened at Columbus, Judge
Thompson Presiding—The Newark
Cases Under Consideration.

Columbus, O., Dec. 1.—The December term of the United States court Judge A. C. Thompson presiding opened this morning. Sherman T. McPherson, who succeeded the late Col. W. F. Bundy of Cincinnati, as district attorney, began his first service in the federal court. During the time Col. Bundy was district attorney, Mr. McPherson was his first assistant. Mr. McPherson's assistants are E. P. Moultrie and Thos. H. Darby.

The case of Cashier H. J. Hoover of Newark is to come before the grand jury and the Miller & Struble case is also slated for hearing at this term of court.

President Benjamin Franklin, Cashier J. M. Maylene, Frank J. Bader and a number of others among them being attorneys and witnesses, came to Columbus this morning in connection with the cases before the federal court. Harry P. Scott received no subpoena from the court.

While nothing is known about the case at this time it can be said that Hoover is still confined to his room in Newark and it seems altogether probable that a continuance will be asked in case an indictment is found.

PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED.

Marietta, O., Dec. 1.—Train No. 12, the fast eastbound B. & O. S. W. passenger was wrecked in the Belpre yards by running into an open switch and colliding with a yard engine. Engineer Frank McWhorter of Chillicothe, was seriously cut about the head and shoulders.

DAKOTA DIVORCE IS HELD INVALID

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 1.—Judge Jas. A. Howe of the district court has held that a decree granted under the Dakota divorce statutes, if it is proved the non-resident defendant resides there merely to secure a divorce, is null and void.

Killed His Children.

Ashtabula, N. C., Dec. 1.—The jury in the case of J. V. Jay of Buncombe county, who on the morning of October 15 murdered his three children, returned a verdict this morning of murder in the second degree. Jay was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary at hard labor.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Charged with embezzlement of $50,000 from the First National bank of Danville, Ill., which closed its doors November 22, Cashier Francis B. Wright was arrested and brought to Chicago and lodged in jail.

STRANGLER Alfred Knapp Granted Stay of Execution—Sentence Is Suspended by Court for 30 Days.

Hamilton, O., Dec. 1.—The circuit court has granted a motion for a stay of execution of the sentence of death passed upon Alfred A. Knapp for the murder of his wife.

The sentence is suspended 30 days, making Jan. 11, 1904, the date now set for execution.

Arguments on the motion for a new trial were heard yesterday and the case was taken under advisement.

If a new trial is refused by the circuit court, the case will be carried to the supreme court.

FATALLY SHOT. Bucyrus, O., Dec. 1.—Al Servit was probably fatally injured while poking his dog with a shotgun. The dog ran under a table and Servit was trying to dislodge him by prodding him with the butt of the gun, which was discharged accidentally. The load took effect in Servit's body.

CLEVELAND TELLS WHY HE SPOKE

Considered that His Friends Should Know He Would Not Accept Presidential Nomination.

Princeton, Dec. 1.—Former President Grover Cleveland, in a statement, says his decision not to accept a fourth nomination for the presidency was made in order that those who have committed themselves to him might be relieved of what might be considered a pledge of support. Mr. Cleveland dictated the following statement:

"I don't care just how to go into details of the various reasons which prompted my letter to the Brooklyn Eagle. All I care to say is that I had delayed, voicing what was in my mind until now, for I thought the Democratic sentiment on the subject would assume such a complexion as would make it unnecessary for me to express my opinion.

"It seemed to me, however, that so many friends of mine were committing themselves on the subject, and the approaching nominations made it a matter of such serious consideration that I could with propriety, declare the condition of my mind on the subject.

"I can't think it necessary to give in detail, at this time, the reasons which had brought my mind to the conclusion that this public statement should be made. It must be that these reasons will occur to everyone who will give the matter sober and thoughtful consideration."

EVIDENCE HARD TO GET

Cubans Would Repress Any Against
Gen. Wood to Please Roosevelt.

Havana, Dec. 1.—Commenting on the General Wood case now before the United States Senate, the Havana Post says the friends of President Roosevelt in the Senate will not dare to permit an unbiased committee to come to Havana and investigate the record of the late military governor of Cuba.

But the Post at the same time admits that with President Palma and the Cuban authorities fearful lest they might displease Roosevelt, any congressional committee which might come to Cuba in quest of information detrimental to Wood, would find its hands completely tied by its lack of power to compel the attendance of witnesses or even to examine archives or accounts in possession of the present government.

The Post regards the evidence of Major Runcie as most dangerous to the interests of Wood, but adds that there are others here whose testimony before the Senate military committee would be even more likely to defeat Wood's promotion to a major generalship, as going further to affect his honor as a general and an officer.

A FATAL WOUND.

Steubenville, O., Dec. 1.—What will prove a murder grows out of a shooting which followed a boxing contest at Cadiz Junction. Jacob N. Hinds and Jerry Arnold, two young men, engaged in a boxing contest and Hinds was worsted. The crowd broke up and Arnold started home. Hinds followed Arnold and as the latter stepped up to his home door, Hinds called to him. As Arnold turned to face him, Hinds shot him in the breast, the bullet making a wound which is pronounced fatal.

HUNTER IS KILLED.

Columbus, Dec. 1.—Charles Conkle 46, a barber of Gahanna, was accidentally shot and killed while out hunting near that village yesterday. Conkle started alone about 10 o'clock, and at 1 o'clock Charles Elwell and Wm. Clunker, two boys who were looking over their traps, found Conkle dead at the foot of a small hill down which he had rolled, with one limb shot off and a gaping wound in his right side. He leaves a wife and six children.

FEVER Epidemic Is Over and the People are Now Rejoicing.

Laredo, Texas, Dec. 1.—The yellow fever situation in Laredo has vastly improved, the epidemic having practically ended. During the prevalence of the fever there were 1,025 cases and 99 deaths. Regular train service in and out of Laredo was resumed today. Flags are flying on all public buildings, bells are ringing and whistles are blowing today. There is much rejoicing over lifting the quarantine.

NURSES Arrive From Pittsburg to Care for Butler's Patients.

Butler, Pa., Dec. 1.—Two deaths yesterday and another last night, together with 36 new cases, is the latest record of the typhoid plague here. To make matters worse diphtheria has appeared and in one hospital there are 80 typhoid patients, two cases of diphtheria are reported. One more physician was stricken yesterday. Over 100 trained nurses arrived this morning from Pittsburg and more will come today. The town authorities have given up all hope of stamping out the disease before spring. The relief fund has now reached $13,000. It is claimed now there are 1800 cases of fever in Butler.

Pittsburg, Dec. 1.—Typhoid fever continues to claim new victims. Two of the Butler typhoid patients were brought to St. Johns general hospital in Allegheny last night. One of them is said to be in a serious condition. The hospital authorities have made arrangements to receive a total of 30 patients from the fever stricken town, and it was said this morning that probably the entire number would be in the hospital before night. Eight nurses from St. Johns hospital left late last night for Butler.

Received More Remonstrances Against Apostle Reed Smoot from Several States Today.

SENATE

Washington, Dec. 1.—In the Senate today a number of petitions remonstrating against Reed Smoot of Utah, retaining his seat in the body were received. They came principally from Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia.

Mr. Penrose, chairman of the committee on postoffices and postroads, offered a resolution authorizing and directing the postmaster general to send to his committee all the papers relating to the recent postoffice investigation and directing the committee if deemed necessary, to make further investigation. It was referred.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 1.—Two men were killed and one fatally injured in a collision between an eastbound freight and a work train on the Norfolk & Western road, east of Portsmouth. The dead: Engineer C. C. Mitchell of Kenova; Fireman Frank Sullivan of Kenova. Fatally injured: Brakeman Ellswick. Both engines were demolished. Property loss, $40,000.

OHIO POULTRY SHOW.

Columbus, O., Dec. 1.—The Ohio State Poultry Show will be held at the Columbus auditorium, Goodale and Park streets, Feb. 1-6, inclusive. The exhibit this year promises to be a large one. In connection with the poultry show it is proposed to give an exhibit by the National Kennel club.

Electric Cars Collide.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 1.—Fifteen persons were injured, two fatally, in a rear end collision between Whittier electric line cars this morning during a dense fog. Twelve of the injured are women of the World, who were returning from Whittier to Santa Barbara.

WEED GETS SOAKING.

Akron, O., Dec. 1.—Alonso Weed, the midget mayor of Amosville, has come to Akron by the canal route. He turned up wet from head to foot in a restaurant and asked to get near the stove. He said two men told him up and threw him into the canal. Weed is going to Cleveland. He says he is taking a vacation to avoid the wrath of Amosville citizens. Weed worked in Newark recently.

PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The President sent to the Senate the following nomination today: To be Secretary of Hawaii, A. L. C. Atkinson, of Hawaii.

CORONER AT THE HEAD OF HUSBAND SLAYERS

For a Consideration the Official Gave Satisfactory Verdict

Five Women are Under Arrest and Many More are Suspected—Coroner Has Intimated That He Will Make a Full Confession.

Budapest, Dec. 1.—Coroner Hunsach, who is in jail charged with being the active agent of a club of married women who murdered their husbands, is in a state of nervous collapse, and has intimated to the authorities that he is willing to make a full confession. As the club is composed of some of the richest women in social life in and around Veresmacht near Arad, Hungary, every effort is being made to prevent this confession becoming public.

It is charged that Hunsach supplied the members of the club with the poison by which to kill their husbands, and then, in his capacity of coroner, he would bring in a verdict of death by heart disease. Five women charged with killing their husbands have already been arrested, and many more arrests are expected at any moment.

The club, which is extensive, is modeled on the famous husband-killing organization that flourished in Northern Italy a few centuries ago. The Italian organization caused a wholesale slaughter of men whose wives were either tired of them or else who treated their wives unkindly or cruelly.

The Veresmacht Club was well organized, had abundant money behind it, and its members have considerable social and political influence.

Its method of work was extremely simple. When a woman was heard to complain of her husband, or to say that she was sorry that she had ever married, an agent of the club would visit her and show her how easily she could get rid of the man she hated if she refused the first offer to become a member of the club a second agent was sent to her, until, finally either through willingness or fear she became a member and an accomplice of the gang of assassins who posed in Alt Arad as society leaders.

When the proper time came and she was keyed up to her work, Coroner Hunsach would give her the poison and instruct her as to its use. He would take care to be on the spot when the death was reported, and after a mock investigation, would bring in a verdict of death by heart disease or apoplexy, grant a burial certificate, and thus destroy any chance that the police might have had to find evidences of the crime.

In return for his services as an agent of death the Coroner received a certain percentage of the estate of the murdered spouse. This sum he made in separate agreement with the women with whom he acted. In some case they are said to have paid as high as 25 per cent for the Coroner's services and silence. He had grown suddenly from a man of modest means to a position of wealth and affluence.

How long the club has been in existence, and how many murders have been committed by the women; is the one subject that is stirring the police. But for the suspicions of an heir to the estate of one of the murdered husbands the club would never have been discovered.

The heir went secretly to the graves of the dead man, removed his viscera, and had it analyzed, obtaining indisputable evidence of poison. He at once started the prosecution of the widow for murder, and, in the investigation that followed, the terrible details of the club of murderesses were laid bare.

FOUGHT HEAD HUNTERS

For Four Days Without Food Killing at Least 90--
One American Officer in Single Handed Fight
Killed Six of the Tribesmen.

Washington, Dec. 1.—News of a fight several weeks ago, in Nueva Vizcaya, a province in central Luzon, about 100 miles northeast of Manila, has just been received in this city today. Although in its way quite as important as General Wood's fight with the Moros, details of which were promptly cabled to and published by the war department. A detachment of the constabulary for four days fought six hundred savage head-hunters of the Galinga tribe, all of the time being without food. Two of the constabularies were killed, but of the enemy at least 90 fell and a large quantity of ammunition, seven guns, 120 lead axes, many bolos and other weapons were captured. Lieutenant Velasquez commanding the constabulary, engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with seven of the tribesmen, killing six of them.

FINANCIERS

Say Mr. Roosevelt Will Find Little Money Below Fulton Street for a Campaign Fund.

New York Dec. 1.—Financiers whose interests are associated in the recent railroad mergers and trusts have let it become known that if President Roosevelt is renominated they will not contribute to the campaign fund unless the chief executive promises to go slow in the investigations of combinations of capital. Already the open expression is heard in banking circles: "If Roosevelt is renominated and gives evidence of attacking all combinations of capital, wherever found, he will find but little money below Fulton street for the campaign fund."

FEAR THAT CITY WILL BE BAZED

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—For nearly three days the city of Cumana, state of Meriduz, on the gulf of Caracas, has been enveloped in sulphurous smoke.

The inhabitants of the place, numbering 100,000, are afraid to leave their homes. Cumana has been destroyed six times by earthquakes.

WIRE SNAPPED

One End Striking Edward Mauger's
Face, Inflicting a Painful Wound
Tuesday Morning.

Edward Mauger, a lineman employed by the Newark and Granville railroad company, met with a painful accident Tuesday morning, while working at the new trolley connection at the car barn. He was cutting a heavy wire and as it severed, one end snapped into his face, the end of the wire striking him in the nostril, going through the side of the nose and coming out under the eye, also badly lacerating the face. He was taken to the office of Dr. D. H. Miller where the injury was dressed, and he insisted on returning to work, but finally took the physician's advice to go home and rest for a time before resuming work.

Troops Withdrawn

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 1.—Governor Beckham has ordered the withdrawal of the state troops stationed at Jackson, Breathitt county. The order was issued on a statement of Circuit Judge Redwine that troops are no longer necessary for the preservation of order. For a month past the number of troops on duty at Jackson has been only 25 under command of Capt. Will Longmire.

LAWYER'S SUICIDE.

Columbus, O., Dec. 1.—C. P. L. Butler, 47, a prominent member of the Columbus bar shot and killed himself in his room last evening. Butler has been in ill health for some time and since the death of his mother has been subject to moody periods. It is supposed that in one of these he took his life.

A new brewery is in process of erection at Columbus.

WOOD CASE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 1.—While it has taken some time to bring the Wood case now pending before the Senate committee into such tangible form as to make a respectable showing for the opposition to Wood's confirmation, the indications now point to a searching investigation, covering many of General Wood's acts, both while Governor of the province of Santiago and governor general of Cuba. Most of the allegations now to be looked into by the Senate committee were known to the war department which in a large measure encouraged Wood's course. Some of the most sensational details were formulated into regular charges, filed by Major Rathbone with the war department before Wood sailed for the Philippine islands, but action on them was refused by the war department. Secretary Root simply stating that "the department was cognizant of the facts and sanctioned them." Among the charges was one alleging that Wood in violation of the express language of the statutes, received double pay—his army pay proper, and a like amount from the Cuban treasury, to reimburse him for extraordinary expenses. The testimony of witnesses now under subpoena points to the intention of the Senate committee to go into other charges—that Wood procured Rathbone's conviction by representing to the court, or causing it to be understood, that such was the desire of the American government.

General Brooke's statement, showing in detail numerous incidents of insubordination on the part of General Wood, have made a deep impression here, as well as the fact that Wood could never have committed these various things complained of without the active co-operation of the war department, at that time under full control of General Henry C. Corbin.

Ohio Normal Schools.

Columbus, Dec. 1.—Former State Representative Swan filed with Gov. Nash today a report of the State Normal school commission recommending the establishment of a state board of education of five non-salaried members appointed so that one member shall retire annually. The commission also recommends that the state normal school system established temporarily two years ago shall be made permanent.

Collieries Close.

Shamokin, Pa., Dec. 1.—The Centra collieries and the Sioux and Mt. Carmel collieries closed down last night for an indefinite period, causing 2,500 men and boys to be thrown out of employment.

NAMES OF MEN

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 1.—The confession of ex-City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury, in regard to the notorious water scandal in this city, was told for the first time in court at the preliminary examination of State Senator David Burns, and it has created an immense sensation on account of the number of prominent persons it implicates, in addition to the 17 officials and former officials who were arrested on bribery charges 10 days ago.

PRESIDENT

Is Charged With Collusion by the Chief Officer of the Sportsman's League.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 1.—James Fullerton, of Red Lodge, Mont., National President of the Sportsman's Game Protective Association, in an interview boldly charged that official corruption exists in the Yellowstone National National Park.

Mr. Fullerton has been gathering evidence in support of his charges, and he now says he is prepared to prove every one of them.

He has addressed the following letter to a certain Congressman:

"Dear Sir—We have for a long time been trying to get an investigation into the condition of affairs in the Yellowstone Park. I now ask you to bring the matter before the House or Senate that a committee may be appointed that will impartially investigate the charges of venality and corruption against the officials who have charge of the park.

"I stand prepared to furnish indisputable proof that the President, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Major Pitcher, Superintendent of the park, have been in collusion for a year to allow H. W. Childs to run a lot of illegal saloons in Yellowstone Park. I am, with respect, your truly,
"JAMES FULLERTON.
"Pres. Sportsman Game Prot. Assn."

Dyspepsia Tablets

Rexall

TRADE NAME

The Secret of Long Life

If you would live long, guard your stomach. Most cases of sickness and death are traced to the stomach. A disordered stomach shuts off food nourishment—the active principle of life. No other disease accomplishes this as quickly or so effectively as dyspepsia. Does your food distress you? Does a bitter fluid rise in your throat? Are you weak and dizzy? Does everything appear dark when you suddenly straighten up from a bent position? Is there a bad taste in your mouth and is your breath foul? Do you experience a sense of impending calamity? Are you becoming thin and haggard? Then you have dyspepsia!

Many people think these symptoms will pass away of their own accord. [They will not! Dyspepsia never cures itself—even the best scientists often fail to cure it.] We know of but one remedy that will positively cure this disease—Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets.

These tablets furnish the one element necessary to enable the stomach to digest food and to again take up the work of supplying nourishment to the furnished body.

We have seen them effect many marvelous cures. We do not know of a single instance where they failed to greatly benefit the sufferer.

We want you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, and agree to return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Price 25 cents per full size package. Only at our store or by mail.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Wise Caterpillar

“Glad to see you back!” exclaimed Mr. Caterpillar when he met Mr. Bug on the street. “Have a good time?”

“Fine, fine!” replied Mr. Bug, smiling.

You see, Mr. Bug had just returned from his vacation, which he spent at the seashore, and he was strolling along with his valise in hand when he met Mr. Caterpillar.

Of course he had a great deal to say about the many sights he saw and the many things he did, and he entertained Mr. Caterpillar for fully seven minutes in this manner.

“Well,” said Mr. Caterpillar, “you certainly did have a good time, judging from what you say. I would have liked to have been along with you, but did you hear the news?”

“No,” replied Mr. Bug.

“Oh, my!” cried Mr. Bug. “I haven’t a cent!”

“And another to collect the grocer’s bill!”

“Wow!” cried Mr. Bug. “I haven’t a penny!”

“And another to collect the doctor’s bill!”

“When?” cried Mr. Bug. “I haven’t a cent!”

“Then I guess they’ll send you to jail!” declared Mr. Caterpillar.

“But you will have one consolation—you had a good time while you were away spending your money. Goodbye.”

“Hold on!” cried Mr. Bug. “Don’t leave me!”

“Oh, yes, I must,” said Mr. Caterpillar. “I’ve got to take the money I saved by staying at home this year and pay my doctor and grocer and landlord.”—Atlanta Constitution.

Lock of Trading Tickets Perils Woman's Tribute to Dead Husband.

There is a trade stamp craze in Springfield, O. The other day a woman went to buy a manometer to be erected on the grave of her husband, who died recently, says the Chicago River Ocean.

After she had selected the same, which was valued at $120, she asked the dealer if he had trading stamps.

He replied that he was not in the habit of doing such a thing, but that she could buy them if she would.

She then asked him how many stamps she would need to buy the manometer.

He replied that she would need a great many, but that he would try to get her the best bargain.

A BETRAYAL OF CONFIDENCE

By Howard Fielding

Copyright, 1931, by Howard W. Brooke

IT was the sound of my own voice that woke me from the state of unconscious wakefulness which I call sleep. The hour was uncertain, but the night seemed on the wane. The room had the gray glow of a dim cell under ground, and the four walls lurked in shadows like four dark robed impostors watching some tortured victim on the rack.

I sat upon a pillow with my back against the brazen grille at the head of the bed. The bars were as cold as an Eskimo's idea of perdition, and no doubt they printed their pattern on me as I crouched there for two minutes gibbering like a scared monkey. Having attained full consciousness through this pleasant process, which has become quite usual with me, I began to repeat the phrase that I had uttered automatically before waking:

“As her husband is a citizen of Rhode Island—”

Could it be possible that I had put those words into a letter addressed to the one person in the world who mustn't know that the young woman in question has a husband? I knew myself too well to doubt that I had done it. My memory, for all useful purposes, is gone. I meet my friends and do not know their names; I talk with them and forget the subject which is under discussion even while I am in the very act of discussing it.

But when I am asleep—or sunk in that purgatory of mental stress through which I never can quite win my way into the heaven of sleep—I am liable to remember anything—minute details of my boyhood, the exact turn of a phrase or glance of an eye that marked a scene of youth, but chiefly my own faults and errors. These, whether of long ago or of the day just done, come into my mind with startling suddenness and always with absolute accuracy, so far as I am able to determine. Sometimes I repeat aloud my own words or those of others; sometimes I utter vain protests against the recurrence of such thoughts, but the end is always the same—I pass through purgatory in the wrong direction and am cast into the torment of Wide-awake.

The way in which this memory had come to me stamped it as genuine. Moreover, I have a rule for such matters, and I rely upon it with a sad certainty—that which is good is a dream, that which is bad is true.

I arose, shivering, and huddled some clothes upon me, with a heavy hooded bath robe over them. Then I made a fire of sea coal in the parlor and sat down before it to meditate upon a state of affairs which, briefly stated, was this:

An old gentleman named Christopher Hooper, who lives in Sayville, on the Maine coast, a pretty little town where I have spent a summer or two, had written to me for a legal opinion upon the status of certain property. He particularly desired to know what would become of it in case he should die without a will. He did not say why he wished to die without a will, but I was of the opinion that he might do worse. Indeed, I was considerably relieved to find that such was his intention. If he should not change his mind upon this point his granddaughter, Gertrude Ellis, would inherit about a quarter of a million dollars, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

In regard to the property mentioned in his letter asking my advice there might be a squabble over the matter of partition, and if litigation should arise the situation would be complicated by the fact that Gertrude was no longer a minor, with a legal residence in Maine, but was secretly married to Robert N. Ellis of New York Island.

Ellis was a young man who had had a little money and had lost it through neglecting the advice of Christopher Hooper. This was a serious offense, but he had managed to get out of himself off from pardon by taking a vacation on a new-ship, Mr. Hooper had signed all non-sensical as a result of having been advised by one of them in a course of a political campaign in 1928. Ellis had met Gertrude in summer vacations, as I had. He was still in his youth and with a sunny view of life. It was better that he should win her. I had never striven against him nor said one word in my own cause. I had no exalted notions of self abnegation. I thought that this would be like other sorrows, but somehow it isn't.

They made a great friend of me, and when it came to their childish folly of a secret marriage I was their sole confidant. I tried to dissuade them, selfishly, generously, I don't know which. Perhaps the meeting of those storms of different considerations in my brain may have had something to do with the condition of it. At any rate, if it hurt me it benefited no one else. They were married as a guarantee to Ellis that old Christopher Hooper's opposition should not wreck his hopes. The ceremony occurred in New York, where Gertrude spends her winters with an aunt who is so dull of wit that I think the wedding might have taken place in her own parlor and she have been none the wiser. I was the only accomplice.

It was some months later that I sat my letter from Mr. Hooper. As I sat down to answer it I said to myself: “I must be careful. I don't know what I'm about.”

I had done my best with it, and my best had been as bad as possible, for those words had crept in:

“As her husband is a citizen of Rhode Island—”

The name of the state would identify the man, and as Hooper had once been led to fear a secret marriage no lies, though backed by all the resources of perjury, that are known to a New York lawyer, could repair the mischief.

Beyond doubt I had arranged matters so that Mr. Hooper would not die without a will. No direct advice upon the point could have been half so effective. If he lived long enough to find a bottle of ink after reading my letter Gertrude would be disappointed.

What was to be done? Upon this point I tried to think clearly. There must be a way out of it. I said to myself that if I could have ten minutes of real sleep—say, but five—I could think my way through this difficulty. With deliberation I laid my heavy head against the cushioned chair and closed my eyes despite the force of the springs that held them open—springs that pressed incessantly so that the orbits of the eyes were sore. I saw many visions—the old days at Sayville; Gertrude, seventeen years old, upon a tennis field shaking down the masses of her hair disordered in the game, the picture of youth; the first time I ever saw her. But this has nothing to do with the letter. I must think of that.

Mailed about half past 10 of the evening, it had not yet started on its way to Boston. Only one mail a day at Sayville. I wrote a letter to Gertrude once and beat it to Sayville by a full day's time. If I take the fast express at 10 o'clock this morning I may be there in time. In that case I'll find some way to intercept the letter. I'll bribe a servant. So that's all settled and off my mind, and I may sit here in this chair and dream of things that aren't true. All that is good is a dream.

It is a comfort to ride in a railroad train. The engineer knows his way, and the conductor, for a consideration, will put an absent minded passenger off at the proper station. If he happens to forget to render this service why should the absent minded passenger make trouble? Rather let him be comforted by the thought that some one else has lost his memory. However, Boston is a terminal, so there is no risk.

In Boston it is raining to a degree that Noah never saw the like of. The roof of the cab in which I cross the city roars with the flood that is descending upon it.

Beyond Boston the train seems like a submarine boat. Night closes in, and the rain still falls. We are late at Portland, later yet at the junction where I must change to the little branch road.

A man with a lantern leads me to a little inn that looms in an ocean of rain. He takes it for granted that I want to go to bed. Probably he has never seen a man who did not have that natural inclination at such an hour of the morning.

Next day the weather had cleared. The sun shone brightly, but the whole region seemed to be a lake. I had many misgivings, yet the branch train started confidently on time. It ran about ten miles and then stopped while the track ahead was tested and repaired.

A few miles farther along the same process was repeated, and so we crept down to Belfast, arriving too late for the boat across the bay.

A few miles farther along the same process was repeated, and so we crept down to Belfast, arriving too late for the boat across the bay.

Marked each Sayville about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, coming down by stage along the east bank of the Penobscot. By the best calculation that I could make my letter had been in the very train that had taken me to the junction. It would probably fail to make connections at Bangor because of the storm and would not go down to Sayville until next day, but if I should wait for tomorrow's boat I might be too late to intercept the letter, the margin of time being very narrow. Therefore it was advisable for me to hire my own transportation across the bay.

It was 2 o'clock when we drifted into Sayville harbor.

While I was walking up the main street of the town I encountered Hiram Banks, who was Mr. Hooper's handy man.

“Rather early for summer visitors, ain't it?” he inquired. “How'd ye come? Sailboat, eh? You must a' ben in a hurry. Goin' up to the house, I suppose. I knew Mr. Hooper'd written to ye. He's sick. Just took; quite bad. I'm goin' for the doctor.”

“Has he been to the mail?” I demanded.

“Just come from there,” he replied.

“When he was took.”

So my letter had come despite my hopes, and it had prostrated the old man. Well, I might have expected as much. What was to be done? My mind refused to take hold of the problem, but some instinct directed my body. I went to the telegraph office and sent this message to Gertrude:

“Matter of R. N. E. necessitates your coming here at once.”

Then I went to the Hooper house. The old gentleman was quite ill, and the doctor advised me not to try to see him. I waited till evening, when he was considerably improved, and then I went to his room. His first words let me know that he had not received my letter, but in the meantime I had had a telegram from Gertrude saying that she had started. I had not the resolution to tell Mr. Hooper this. Gertrude must explain her own coming.

As to mine, I had no trouble, alleging his letter as the excuse for it.

I went down to the Belfast boat to meet Gertrude next day. My soul feared the sight of her.

The boat did not bring her, and I hurried back to the house. Banks was standing on the steps.

“She came by the stage,” said he. “I meant to tell ye 'twas likely.”

“The stage?” I gasped.

“It gets in an hour earlier Thursdays,” said he. “Don't ye remember?”

“Remember?” I echoed, striking my forehead with my clinched hand. “How should I remember anything? Where is she?”

“Gone up to his room,” he replied.

“Have you heard?”

“I ain't heard nothing,” said he. “Is there likely to be a rumour?”

I strode by him into the parlor and flung my overcoat off upon the floor.

As I did so something fell out of the breast pocket. I picked it up. It was my letter to Christopher Hooper.

I had forgotten to mail it! All this mental torment, this self accusation, this scurrying across country, this insane summons to Gertrude, had been wholly unnecessary. The affliction which had caused the trouble had, in the mystery of divine mercy, averted it or would have done so but for my own panic.

I ripped the letter open. It was a lengthy communication, but I knew just where to look for the bit of lunacy that had dribbled from my pen. There it stood, most plainly written down. “As her husband is a citizen of Rhode Island.” The phrase had recurred to me accurately in sleep.

The need of the moment was for quick and accurate thought upon the present emergency, but there was no one to think it. I stood wringing the letter in my dripping hands until it was a mere rag, and my mind was wrong in precisely the same way. All I could think of was that Gertrude was in the room over my head. Without a notion as to what I should say or do I rushed up the stairs four at a leap.

Some one said “Come in,” as I knocked at Hooper's door. Entering, I beheld the old gentleman lying upon a couch and prepped up with pillows. His white hair floated round his head. It was of a perfect whiteness and as fine as the strands of a sunbeam. With his clear blue eyes it gave him a certain beauty, and I marked a serenity upon his countenance that was not quite his customary expression.

Gertrude was sitting upon a hassock beside the couch. She had been shedding tears. As I entered she rose quickly and with the spring and the grace of youth. The old man eyed her admiringly in the second's time before she spoke.

“I have confessed all to grandfather, and he has forgiven me,” she said. “I am so glad you sent for me!”

MOTHER AND CHILD
Scott's Emulsion is cod liver oil made almost as palatable as milk. It is easy and soothing to the weak stomach; it checks the tendencies of children toward thinness. Scott's Emulsion gives strength to weak mothers because it creates healthy flesh and new blood. Nursing mothers will find a special value in Scott's Emulsion because it insures a flow of rich, nourishing milk for the baby. More and better than a medicine; Scott's Emulsion is a food. Scott's Emulsion is not a mere extract, containing imaginary "active principles" which do not exist, but is full of actual nourishment which sustains vital force and builds up the body tissues more rapidly than any other known remedy.

THE RAILWAYS

M. Heaney's Trip.
B. & O. Supervisor of Tracks Michael Heaney, formerly of Newark, now of Zanesville, was in Newark on Sunday after returning from an extensive trip, having granted leave of absence for two weeks by the company. Mr. Heaney visited his sister, Mrs. P. Cunningham in Philadelphia. He also visited in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. He visited the Brooklyn navy yards and also the old Castle Garden at New York, where he first landed when he came to America from Ireland, the land of his birth. While there he took a boat out to the Statue of Liberty, and went down to Ellis Island. He was also on board the steamship New York, of the American line, and examined every portion of that vessel. He made a visit to the Baldwin locomotive works at Philadelphia. Mr. Heaney made an investigating tour among the railroad employees of the east and says that after a thorough examination of the eastern systems, he likes the old B. & O. system better than any other line he saw. The home employees are more accommodating and more thoroughly informed on matters pertaining to their duties. As Mr. Heaney is an expert railroad man, and an excellent judge of good tracks, he certainly knows what he is talking about. He reports having a nice trip and having had splendid weather during his trip. Mr. Heaney is supervisor of tracks on the C. O. division of the B. & O. from Zanesville to Cambridge, also on the Sayre branch, and on the O. & L. K. from Zanesville to Parkersburg, W. Va. Mr. Heaney has many relatives in the East End, among whom are the Cummings and McGinleys. His wife and son accompanied him on the trip and are now at their home in Zanesville.

Why She Was "Thankful."
A camp meeting was in progress in the wire grass region of Georgia. The afternoon service was conducted by Uncle Mose Bradford, an exhorter of deep piety, but entirely innocent of book-learning. He took for his text on this occasion the words of St. Paul, "For I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content."

After talking about fifteen minutes on the beauty of contentment from a Christian's point of view he suddenly announced that he was going to "throw the meeting open." His invitation was "If you've got anything to be thankful for sit up and say so."

One after another rose and spoke of peace and contentment under circumstances that seemed impossible, judged from a worldly standpoint. Some said they were thankful for things they had missed, and at last an old lady arose, pushed back her sunbonnet and with a beaming countenance triumphantly exclaimed, "Well, Brother Mose, I hain't got but two teeth; but, thank God, they hit!"—Lippincott's.

Mrs. Haskell, Worthy Vice-Templar, Independent Order Good Templars, of Silver Lake, Mass., tells of her cure by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Four years ago I was nearly dead with inflammation and ulceration. I endured daily untold agony, and life was a burden to me. I had used medicines and washes internally and externally until I made up my mind that there was no relief for me. Calling at the home of a friend, I noticed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My friend endorsed it highly, and I decided to give it a trial to see if it would help me. It took patience and perseverance for I was in bad condition, and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nearly five months before I was cured, but what a change, from despair to happiness, from misery to the delightful exhilarating feeling health always brings. I would not change back for a thousand dollars, and your Vegetable Compound is a grand medicine."

"I wish every sick woman would try it and be convinced."—Mrs. IDA HASKELL, Silver Lake, Mass. Worthy Vice-Templar, Independent Order of Good Templars.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Conductor Stewart is laying off for a few trips.

Brakeman Kirby has been marked up for service after having been off for a few trips.

Why She Was "Thankful."
A camp meeting was in progress in the wire grass region of Georgia. The afternoon service was conducted by Uncle Mose Bradford, an exhorter of deep piety, but entirely innocent of book-learning. He took for his text on this occasion the words of St. Paul, "For I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content."

After talking about fifteen minutes on the beauty of contentment from a Christian's point of view he suddenly announced that he was going to "throw the meeting open." His invitation was "If you've got anything to be thankful for sit up and say so."

One after another rose and spoke of peace and contentment under circumstances that seemed impossible, judged from a worldly standpoint. Some said they were thankful for things they had missed, and at last an old lady arose, pushed back her sunbonnet and with a beaming countenance triumphantly exclaimed, "Well, Brother Mose, I hain't got but two teeth; but, thank God, they hit!"—Lippincott's.

While Roosevelt's promotion of General Wood over the heads of older and more meritorious officers is indefensible, it must be taken into account that Hanna's opposition to the General's confirmation is not actuated by a worthy motive. Hanna opposes Wood's confirmation because he is the champion of Rathbone, who was prosecuted and convicted under the Wood administration of theft in the Cuban postal service. If General Wood deserved credit for anything as military governor of Cuba, it was for his prosecution of the postal thieves. Hence the Rathbone opposition, backed by Hanna, has nothing to commend it, no matter how underserving and objectionable is the promotion of Wood by Roosevelt.

The investigation by the Senate committee on military affairs of the General Wood promotion is developing much testimony any branch of which justifies its rejection, were the disregard of the deserts of 1901 officer and older officers not sufficient. The silver star presented by the Jai Alai has been traced, and now Major Lucile testifies that at a dinner in Wood's house Baker, a magazine writer, General Wood and himself arranged for the Runcie article in the North American Review, which criticized General Brooke's administration and gained the succession for Wood. Baker's testimony is awaited to clinch this conclusive story affecting Wood's fitness, and it is said that the resident promises to withdraw the nomination if Baker corroborates Runcie. But the overleaping of seniors in service is the point that ought to induce the President so to act.

Evidences increase that the slaughter of 300 Moros by General Wood was designed and planned to obtain new lustre in the Philippines, to offset the charges against his career in Cuba. For five years Jolo chiefs had given the United States no trouble, and no cause has yet been assigned for the alleged uprising, which required sending the Major Scott expedition to punish them. The fact that but five Americans were wounded and 300 Moros killed does not suggest a warlike array of natives, nor any deep-seated hostility to this country. Major General Wade has arrived on the scene, and his investigation may place General Wood in a worse predicament than now. One of the charges against him is the inspiring of articles derogatory of his superior and eulogistic of himself. Perhaps he arranged, on the same theory, the alleged ambush which proved so harmless to our soldiers. Of course General Wade's report will be suppressed by that notorious censor, Secretary Root.

JUDGE PARKER

While Holding a Judicial Position He Does Not Believe It Becoming to Talk Party Politics--Would Not Accept Presidential Nomination from a Divided Party.

Esopus, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Chief Judge Alton B. Parker, of the New York court of appeals, today received a representative of the press at his residence on the Hudson. The judge read a copy of Mr. Cleveland's letter declining to be considered as a Democratic presidential possibility, and a proof of the Brooklyn Eagle's editorial, headed "For President, Alton B. Parker." He then said:

"These matters are interesting. I cannot, however, comment upon them, nor speak of relations to any political candidacy in which I may be placed by others, nor talk politics at all. The newspapers can do a great service by saying that this is my decision. I shall have nothing whatever to say on political subjects, personal or general, while holding a judicial position."

In this statement Judge Parker reiterated what he said last August, when discussion was current regarding his possible nomination for governor by the Democrats, as a preliminary step to his candidacy for President in 1904. He laid down for himself the policy of holding strictly aloof from politics, and he intends to adhere to this policy.

It is not a violation of confidence to say that Judge Parker was surprised at Mr. Cleveland's announcement that he would not, under any circumstances, accept the nomination for President next year. Judge Parker's friends in this section say that he has believed that Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Gray and Mr. Bryan would continue to be the strong personal factors in the canvass for the Democratic presidential nomination. He accepts Mr. Cleveland's announcement as final, however, and forges a readjustment of the lines of anti-convention work by the Democratic leaders in consequence of it.

The inference is drawn by Judge Parker's intimate friends that he would not accept a nomination for the presidency from a divided party. In recent conversation he has made this point intelligible, while in no way intimating that he considers his nomination a possibility, or that he is considering an acceptance under any circumstances.

The Bristow Report on Hot Air.

(Pittsburg Post)

A safe period having elapsed since the elections Mr. Roosevelt summons courage to acquaint the public with that marvelous document, so long heralded but hermetically sealed from inspection, the Bristow report on the postal thievery. From fear that the American is illiterate, he kindly imposed on himself the composition of a "Memorandum." But his courage, like Bob Acres' before the duel, was fast oozing from his finger tips. He reads a sermonette on corruption, and, forgetting his Panama performance, intrudes this: "Freedom is not a gift which will tarry long in the hands of the dishonest, or of those so foolish or so incompetent as to tolerate dishonesty in their public servants. The toleration of wrong, not the exposure of wrong, is the real offense." The solitary important sentence recommends extending the statute of limitations to five years in cases affecting officials.

He advises unrelenting prosecution of the indicted officials and he incorporates a list of the offenders, all of whom he virtually finds guilty by his review. He bears most heavily on Tyner, Machen and Beavers, the charges against whom Payne called "hot air." But his timorous nature is best displayed by his sole allusion to the case of Heath. He puts it in parenthesis thus: (The case of First Assistant Postmaster General Heath, who had left the service July 31, 1900, is set forth in the report of Mr. Bristow.)

No sermonette is devoted to that worthy's conduct, which so richly affords a text. It matters not that the statute of limitation ran in his favor, or that an attempt to indict him once failed. His conduct was reprehensible, admitting it not to be criminal, and it furnished a prolific source of suggestion for the charming discourse on corruption.

Let us see what Mr. Bristow says in all that is permitted to be seen in the abridgment sent forth. It is a caustic chronicle of wholesale thievery mainly during Heath's regime and in his bureau. Mr. Roosevelt failed to note that a consul of the United States is implicated by it. All the species of graft made familiar when the persons involved were indicted are detailed carefully. Mr. Heath first appears in the Brandt automatic cashier deal. Judge George E. Baldwin of Canton, O., now consul at Nuremberg, McKimley's old law partner, has a son-in-law named Miller, who becomes the Washington agent.

Miller writes Strawn, superintendent of agencies, that Judge Baldwin advises him to have Miller find out how much Beavers wants, "in dollars and cents," to insure success in introducing the machines in the department. Baldwin goes to Washington by request after this and Heath buys 150 machines at $150 a piece, the selling price in open market being $125. Mr. Bristow says Heath should have been "humanely removed from office." Did Charles Emory Smith do it?

Mr. Heath figures in the Doremus cane-line machine purchases, for which Roosevelt's friend, State Senator Green of New York, is indicted, and Heath escaped. The money transactions went through the smashed Seventh Avenue (the Heath) bank. Green states that he gave Heath $20,000 in stock in consideration of an order for not less than 300 machines. Doremus admits that he was told of the stock transfer. But book entries omit names, and there the case fell down, with the statute of limitations helping. Mr. Heath also appears in an interesting stock transaction about the Montague indicator, a device to time collections from mail boxes. Some documents which would incriminate any ordinary man failed to convince the district attorney in Washington of being enough to warrant Heath's indictment. In all the sub-divisions of his report touching Heath, Mr. Bristow remarks that Heath refused to make a written statement. The whole report is a revelation of petty thievery that Mr. Bristow thinks aggregated $400,000, and the loss to the people only surmisable. But he mentions one item of $7,000,000.

MAKES WORK EASIER.

Newark People Are Pleased to Learn How It Is Done.

It is pretty hard to attend to duties with a constantly aching back. With annoying urinary disorders. Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.

They cure backache. They cure every kidney ill. Amos Fry, shoemaker, of Webb st., says:

"For several years I was never free from pain, a constant sagging pain through my kidneys. It was dull and dead, so that I had to get up and move around if I had been sitting up for any length of time. I took several kidney medicines, but I got no good worth speaking about, for I remained just the same. Through a notice in a local paper I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained at Crayton's drug store. They did the work they promised for they completely took all that miserable pain out of my back."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute. 128

FARMERS

INSTITUTE AT BROWNVILLE ON DEC. 14-15.

Good Music by Porter Sisters and Interesting Papers are Promised—All Invited.

The Brownsville Farmers' Institute Association is to be held at the Presbyterian church at Brownsville, on Monday and Tuesday, December 14-15, when an interesting program will be carried out. The officers of the Association are President, Robert Barnes; vice president, Owen Cooperider; secretary, Olive V. Orr; treasurer, D. G. Hamilton; executive committee, John Shafer, J. A. Drumm, T. B. Iden, Mrs. J. Cooperider, Mrs. G. G. Morehead. The program is as follows:

Monday morning, 9:30:—

Music.

Clover and Other Sources of Fertility, Geo. E. Scott.

Farm Labor Indoors and Outdoors, W. A. Morton.

Pruning Small Fruits and Orchards, W. G. Farnsworth.

Monday afternoon, 1:00:—

Music.

Farm Labor Problem Shall I Rent or Hire? Geo. E. Scott.

The Farmer's Daughter, Her Place and Pay, Miss Helen McMullen.

Barnyard Manures, Emanuel Cooperider.

How We Maintain and Increase Soil Fertility, W. G. Farnsworth.

Monday evening, 7:00:—

Music.

Partnership on the Farm, W. G. Farnsworth.

Can a Young Man Marry on Three Hundred Dollars a Year? Mrs. A. J. Hanna.

Paper, Dr. C. O. Schrader.

Who Shall Follow in Our Footsteps? Geo. E. Scott.

Tuesday morning, 9:30:—

Music.

Advantages of the Farm as a Home, Geo. E. Scott.

Pottering, Mrs. Isabelle Ardrey.

Cycles in Nature, E. P. Walser.

How We Grow and Handle Potatoes, W. G. Farnsworth.

Tuesday afternoon, 1:00:—

Music.

What, When and How to Eat, Geo. E. Scott.

How to Live, Dr. J. Cooperider.

The Influence of the Child in the Home, Mrs. Mabel Hamilton.

The Culture of Fruit by the Farmer, W. G. Farnsworth.

Plenty of good music by the Porter Sisters and others. The two rooms on the lower floor of the Cook and Reeling building have been procured for dinner. All are invited to bring their baskets.

AMUSEMENTS.

The play "A Mountain Pink," given under the auspices of the Drill Team of Golden Rod Lodge, No. 100, A. O. U. W., in the Auditorium, December 4, 1902, gives fair promise to eclipse all previous efforts of amateur shows given in the city. This may sound a little strong when other excellent productions by home talent are taken into consideration, but the master hand of several professionals are in this production. Those who enjoy a good hearty laugh should purchase their tickets early as every promise is given for the largest house in the history of the Auditorium.

A RECORD BREAKER.

The Whitney Opera Company in "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," not only broke all records for receipts at the New York theatre, but have continued to do so in every city visited, including Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Paul, and Minneapolis and in the few smaller cities or one night stands there is not an instance on record where the entire house has not been sold out within a few hours after the sale opened. This attraction is coming to the Auditorium soon.

Fight Will Be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall, of Beall, Miss., has to say: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once and four bottles entirely cured her." Guaranteed by Frank D. Hall, Druggist.

DR. KAYLOR AT ZANESVILLE.

Zanesville, O., Dec. 1.—Rev. A. H. Kaylor, the evangelist who conducted meetings recently at Newark and who worked Coshocton and later at Dresden, has begun a week's engagement at the First Presbyterian church here, being assisted by the singing evangelist, Miss Mary Robinson, of Pittsburg. Last evening a goodly assemblage heard the eloquent divine and sweet singer, and the meetings give great promise of future increase in spirit and numbers.

At present essence of roses is almost the only article exported to the United States from Bulgaria, and agricultural machines are almost the only direct imports from the United States.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Why the Tortoise Won

Did you ever hear the true story of the race between the hare and the tortoise? Old Brother Terrapin told it to me one day as I lay on my back in the grass by the pond.

"Never heard the real truth of that victory of mine, did you?" he squeaked as he crawled up to me.

"No, never," said I. "How was it?" "Well, he laughed, 'you see, they always supposed that I won that race by keeping on plodding along at my usual gait while old man Rabbit frisked around and fooled and wasted his time 'showing off' before the spectators.

"But it was nothing of that sort. Let me tell you at the start that all the plodding in the world without a little thought and common sense will never win anything.

"You see, I had a little bone to pick with that 'yaller' dog of Bill Sikes' 'cause one day when I was asleep he turned me over on my back, and I didn't get my footing for two days and was nearly starved, to say nothing of the worry brought on the old lady and the children. So when Mr. Rabbit and

HE GAVE A YELL OF TERROR.

I started on that race that you've read of I knew at the start that I had no chance to win without some little game. Just then along comes Bill Sikes' 'yaller' dog.

"'Mornin' says he. 'Nice day for the race.'

"'Yes,' says I, and if you want to see the start sit right down where you are, and you'll see a great show."

"So down he sat on his yaller tail and opened his yaller jaws and let his red tongue hang out. 'One, two, three, go!' says the starter, and just then I saw my chance and grabbed Mr. Dog's tail between my jaws. He gave one yell of terror and surprise and set off through the woods toward the goal at lightning speed, pulling me through the air after him. My, but we did fly!

And when we got near the goal I let go and walked the rest. Mr. Dog was so scared he ran on home. Served him right for turning me over. But I won the race. I tell you, brains count," saying which, he ambled off into the woods.—Atlanta Constitution.

ATTENTION, SOLDIERS!

Surely the testimony of one of the survivors of the war of '61 will carry conviction to the mind of every thinking individual. We all know the suffering and privation which the men went through during those years of fighting, and also the depleted physical condition of many of them at the close.

Dodge Center, Minn., May 23, 1890. Gentlemen: I am one of the survivors of the U. S. sanitary commission of the civil war. I am 67 years old, and owe my comfort in living these later years of my life to your Shredded Wheat, which I have used from my first knowledge of it, six years ago or more. I write to say that I have just received your circulars, "The Vital Question," and Gen Booth's "Biscuits." I am amazed at the extent of your operations and the large, educative way your work is extending. Thousands of our brave fellows died of sheer hospital starvation from inability to assimilate the eternal starch and tea and farina and corn starch "hospital diet," that soon cooled disgust, and could not be eaten with the endless whisky and quinine "the extreme south I became invalided," starch dyspeptic "never saved" until I found your Biscuits. You have begun and done a great work. I am glad to see you are getting part of your reward in this world. I am, (Signed) J. M. SPERRY.

The Natural Food Company of Niagara Falls will be pleased to send their Cook Book, "The Vital Question," illustrated in colors, free to any address upon request.

The Future of Niagara Falls.

The face of Niagara is retreating southward, worn away by the immense volumes of water that pass unceasingly over the edge of the precipice. If the quantity of water which is doing this work remains the same as now the front of the falls will have reached the north end of Grand Island in 5,000 years. This is the prediction made by Professor John M. Clark, paleontologist of the state of New York, says Harper's Weekly. His conclusions as to the future of the great falls are that the entire flow of waters to the north will have ceased and the river have run back into Lake Erie, leaving the escarpment dry at a point not very far south of Goat Island, 2,500 years hence.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Vetter Dyspepsia Remedy Co., Cleveland, Ohio.
After months of suffering with dyspepsia, and having vainly sought for relief through the aid of doctors, and a number of so-called dyspepsia cures, at the suggestion of a friend, I tried your "Remedy" and obtained relief within twenty-four hours. I continued the use of the "Remedy" until I had used three bottles, and since that time, now more than a year gone by, I have not had a recurrence of the trouble, and am able to partake of any and all foods that I may desire.

I certainly consider Vetter's Dyspepsia Remedy a boon to all who may be afflicted as I was, and will surely recommend it whenever the opportunity presents itself. Yours very truly,

GAMBLING

LESS OF IT IN NEWARK AT THE PRESENT TIME

Than at Any Time for Years—Credit is Due to the Administration of Mayor Crilly.

There is nothing more noticeable about the improvement of Newark, city, and the methods of administration of its laws and ordinances, than the almost total suppression of gambling, which is at present less of an evil than it has been for many years. This has been accomplished through the energetic enforcement of the law, under the direction of Mayor Crilly, and has been the work of only a few short months. At the time he took up the reins of city government the city was infested with innumerable gambling houses, among them being a great number of cheap games, where men of meagre income, and boys could play for small stakes. These latter have been absolutely suppressed and cannot be found within the confines of the city.

Mayor Crilly has had his police make visits to resorts where it was known gambling had been going on when he went into office, and in some cases these rooms have been converted into dwelling apartments, while in others there could be detected not a suspicious circumstance. It must be recognized that the police can not, without reasonable and very good grounds for suspicion, break into a room, and thus make themselves and the city liable should nothing unlawful be found.

There are none of the slot machines, where money is paid, in operation, and whatever sporadic cases of gambling exist in Newark, are so quickly conducted that officers are powerless to get evidence enough to bring an action. As long as Newark is a city there will be some gambling, as it will be done in men's homes if no place else, but at present there is less, and what does exist is so quickly conducted that a far as evil tendencies are concerned it may be said that Newark is absolutely free from the baneful influences of the gambling vice.

THE STORY OF FATHER JOHN'S

An interesting History of Fifty Years.

In 1848, Rev. Father John O'Brien, a noble man, came to Lowell, Mass., to do the Master's work in St. Patrick's Parish. In 1854 Father John as he was known to his people, was attacked with a serious cold which, developing into a stubborn cough and action of the lungs, caused the greatest alarm for the health of the beloved clergyman.

Medical skill seemed unable to stay the progress of the disease. Finally, an Eminent Specialist was consulted who gave Father John a prescription to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble, as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The clergyman took the prescription to the old drug store of Carleton & Hovey, Lowell, Mass., the firm by whom Father John's Medicine is prepared. The cough soon disappeared and his people rejoiced when he declared that he had been made as well and strong as ever.

Father John recommended the medicine to his parishioners and friends and thousands were made well and strong by taking it. In getting this prescription they always called for "Father John's Medicine," and so it was named by the people, and advertised—all with the approval and sanction of Reverend Father O'Brien.

This old-fashioned wholesome remedy is unequalled as a body builder and tonic. It restores health and strength to all run down systems. Its gentle laxative effect strengthens the stomach and corrects the digestion. It drives out all impurities. It is a food medicine and contains only pure nourishment. It is not a patent medicine, and it is free from opium, morphine or poisonous drugs in any form, which are found in the majority of patent preparations.

While it is not a "cough syrup" or "balm," nothing equals this prescription for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles. It has a most soothing and healing effect, and at the same time builds up the body and makes strength.

We have permission to refer to the Sisters Superior at the following: Homes and Hospitals where Father John's Medicine is in use: Sisters of Charity, St. John's Hospital, Lowell, Mass., Notre Dame de Lourdes hospital, Manchester, N. H., Sisters of Mercy, St. Patrick's Orphanage, Manchester, N. H., and many others, the names of which we shall be pleased to furnish upon application. When you ask your druggist for Father John's Medicine, remember that the $1 bottles contain three times the quantity of the 50 cent size.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY

Take Advantage of Half Price Offer Made by F. D. Hall.

In these times when living expenses have increased from thirty to fifty per cent, it is unusual to hear of a standard remedy being offered at half price.

Yet that is the way Mr. Hall, the popular druggist, is selling Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation. In addition to selling a fifty cent bottle, containing a month's treatment of sixty doses, for 25 cents, he gives his personal guarantee with every bottle he sells to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

This unusual offer has brought hundreds of customers to his store in the last few weeks, yet out of the many bottles of Dr. Howard's specific he has sold, but one customer asked to have the money returned. This was done without any questions, although Mr. Hall does not think the remedy could have been given a fair trial.

Doctor's bills can be saved by the use of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation, and by taking advantage of this special half price introductory offer, our readers can save half the regular price of the specific.

Do not let this opportunity pass to obtain a standard fifty cent remedy at half price. Remember that Druggist Hall will refund your money if Dr. Howard's specific does not cure. 1-5-9

School Board Affair.

Granville, O., Dec. 1.—An informal meeting of the Board of Education of Granville Township was held Saturday evening. The occasion was the retirement of Wm. H. Pittsford as President of the school board, and the election of Abner L. Clouse as his successor.

In retiring from his position on the board Mr. Pittsford spoke feelingly in regard to the courtesy shown him by his fellow members.

In response speeches of regret were made by Charles Reese, A. M. McMullen, S. A. Smith, J. C. Malone and George W. Evans.

Mr. Pittsford was greatly surprised when Mr. Frank Granger, in a neat speech, invited him, in behalf of the board, to the Ormsford House, and was more surprised on entering the dining hall to find a sumptuous repast spread by Mrs. Ormsford, through the courtesy of the board, to show their appreciation of their retiring member.

BOWSER'S BARGAIN

He Buys a Horse and Takes Mrs. B. Out For a Drive and Has a Few Adventures on the Way That Bring Him Home on Foot in Vtter Dismay.

(Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis)

THE other day at 2 o'clock in the afternoon Mr. Bowser drove up to his gate with a horse and buggy, or, rather, was driven up by a horse looking man, who said to him as they got out of the vehicle:

"Well, you've picked up the bargain of your life. If it wasn't that I need money worse than at any time in the last ten years I'd not part with this rig at any price. Indeed, I promised my mother, who owned this horse when a young colt and had the greatest affection for him, that he should never pass out of my hands. I don't know how to explain matters to her. Be kind to the horse, Bowser. Be kind to him."

"I assure you that I will," was the reply.

"He's got a sensitive nature. If you cuss and swear at him it will hurt his feelings as much as if he were a woman. Should you ever hit him with the whip it would break his heart. I have always made it a point to treat him more like a human being than a horse, and I hope you'll keep it up. I also hope that you'll drive around to the stables every day or two and let me pat his nose and speak to him. I don't want him to quite forget me."

"I appreciate the sentiment and will favor it all I can. What did you say his name was?"

"Oh, didn't I tell you? His name is P. D. Q."

"That's an odd name," said Mr. Bowser as he cudgeled his brain to remember where he had ever heard anything like it before.

"Yes, rather odd. He was named by a cousin of mine who is a leading minister in Pittsburg, and I hope you won't change it. Well, so long. I suppose you are anxious to take your wife out for a spin."

"His name is P. D. Q."

"What is it now?" asked Mrs. Bowser as her lord entered the house with the whip in his hand and a 2.30 clip in his eye.

"I was offered that family rig out there for $150, and it is worth $300 at the lowest calculation. I picked it up to save $250 and get my health back. The doctor was telling me yesterday that what I needed was country air, and I propose to take a ten mile ride every morning before breakfast. I want you to go out with me this afternoon to give the horse a trial. I know you'll be delighted."

"Have you paid for the rig?"

"Of course."

"And have got to keep it?"

"Naturally. Why not? You don't seem to be a bit enthusiastic. Perhaps you were expecting me to buy a camel or a yoke of oxen."

"Are you sure you know how to drive a horse?" she faltered.

"What in blazes do you mean by that?" he shouted as he cracked the whip and sent the cat bounding out of the room.

As the outfit had been bought and paid for Mrs. Bowser decided to say no more for the moment, and the idea of a ride into the country was not unpleasant. She was ready in ten minutes, and as the front door closed on her she heard the cat waiting in despair and made up her mind there would be a tragedy of some sort before she returned.

She had not fancied the looks of the equine from a window view, and when she came to approach him closer she realized that Mr. Bowser had been taken in and done for. The horse was not only poor in flesh and shabby on his legs, but he looked tricky and vicious. As Mr. Bowser untied the hitching strap his new purchase bit at him in a venomous way and switched his tail about.

"Did you select him for his playfulness?" queried Mrs. Bowser as she noticed the action.

"Yes, partly," replied Mr. Bowser, whose first impulse was to use the whip. "That is, I didn't want a stone or a wooden horse. That playful spirit is always a good sign in a horse, same as in a human being. Now we are off for a delightful spin, and you can lay back and enjoy yourself. By George, but this beats riding in a palatial car all to pieces! Isn't that a splendid trait he's got? Start right off as if he had twenty pounds of steam on."

Mrs. Bowser didn't lay back and enjoy herself. On the contrary, she sat up and watched the horse closely. There was a slight limp in one hind leg, he pulled to the right as if blind in the left eye, there was a constant click as he overreached and struck a front shoe. Added to these things, his ears were laid back close to his head and held there, and now and then his teeth grated on the bit.

She also saw that Mr. Bowser held the reins with a careless hand and seemed anxious to use the whip. She refrained from saying anything, however, until the buggy had been drawn over a sand pile on one side of the street and a heap of bricks on the other, and then she gently remarked:

"If you intend to bump into any of the shade trees along the street, please give me a few seconds' notice."

"What do you mean by that?" demanded Mr. Bowser. "I thought it was about time you got off some mean remark. The horse is going all right, and I'm doing all right, and—"

And the horse suddenly steered out of his course to graze the hind wheel of a peddler's wagon and almost cause a smashup.

Mr. Bowser wasn't going to make any excuse at all at first, but on second thought he concluded to say that it was all the peddler's fault and that there ought to be a law to prevent a cross eyed man from driving anything but a rhinoceros on the public highway.

Mrs. Bowser would have consented to go without hats or shoes for the next year if she could have been safely transported back home, but her only resource was to hang on and depend upon Providence.

Mr. Bowser had driven two blocks farther when the horse bore to the right and took the wheel off a banana push cart and then sauntered across the street and rubbed the nose of a grocer's horse and got the grocer's boy so excited that he indulged in yells and shouts.

"Are you going to get us both killed?" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser as she got her hat straightened again.

"There you go!" replied Mr. Bowser as he narrowly missed running down an old woman. "Do you want the horse to walk? Shall I tie him to a post? I never held the reins over a better goer, and yet you are finding fault about everything."

"He's either unsafe or else you don't know how to drive."

"That's it; that's it! By John, but why was I fool enough to bring you along? That horse vicious? He's like a lamb, and as far as my driving is concerned!"

He was holding the reins loosely in his left hand and flourishing the whip in his right, and all of a sudden the horse swerved and crossed the street and ran up on the sidewalk and stopped with his head almost at the doors of a drug store.

"Did you think of having a prescription filled?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she got her breath back and found herself still in the buggy.

Mr. Bowser didn't reply. He had waked up to the fact that he was no driver and that the old horse had ways of his own which must eventually lead to a smashup. He was looking pale and was all a-tremble as he leaped out and grabbed the beast by the head, and just then a policeman came up and said:

"You'll get fined $5 for driving on the sidewalk in this way."

"But I didn't drive him up here."

"Then how did he get here?"

"The infernal old beast took a shy."

"Well, you'd better take a shy yourself. I was watching you as you came down the street, and I saw that you knew nothing about driving. It's a wonder you didn't hit another vehicle or run over somebody. How did you happen to come out with the horse?"

"You talk as if I was a boy three years old!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as his anger began to boil and a crowd began to gather. "My driving was all right, but my wife was nervous and afraid and kept speaking to me."

"I'll bet she can drive better than you can when it comes to that. How are you going to get this old brute home? He's aching to run and kick, and you are not the man to handle him."

"Can't I hire some one to drive him back? The man warranted him to be as gentle as a lamb, and I can't see what's got into him. Whoa, you old villain!"

Half a dozen men stepped forward with offers to drive the vehicle back to the Bowser residence for $1, and Mr. Bowser was about to close the deal when the policeman backed the rig clear of the walk and handed the lines to Mrs. Bowser and said:

"You'd better walk home, old man, while your wife drives. As a guardian of the peace it is my duty to save your life if I can do it."

A feeling of recklessness seized Mrs. Bowser, and, although she realized that years and centuries and epochs would pass away before Mr. Bowser could forgive or forget, she picked up the reins and drove off, and, though the three cheers and a "tiger" given her by the crowd of men and boys left behind started the horse into his fastest gait, she managed to steer him a straight course and skip all the ice wagons and moving vans.

He footed it home to find P. D. Q. tied to a tree in front of the house and looking as humble as a rabbit, and his first action was to walk up and give him a hearty kick and exclaim:

"Durn your old flea bitten hide, but I'll kill you with a crowbar and sell your body for soap grease!"

Then he followed the one kick with two more and turned and entered the house. Mrs. Bowser and the cat were there and waiting, but it is best to drop the curtain right here. There are some things too strenuous for public print, and Mr. Bowser has shown the public that he can be strenuous on occasions.

IN THE CAUSE OF REFORM

By CYRUS DERICKSON

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

When Captain Trent was transferred from the Seventh to the Twelfth regiment and took up his quarters at Fort Conger he found that his reputation had preceded him. He was known to the rank and file as a hard man. The captain of a company is well liked or totally disliked. Captain Trent was proud of the fact that he was not only totally disliked, but positively hated, by the men he had power over. It was his nature to bulldoze and bullyrag and tyrannize.

At the first roll call of Company B he had a few words to say to his new command, and from that time on the men knew what to expect. The old captain had kept them fairly up to discipline, and the commander of the post had not let things go at sixes and sevens, but Captain Trent referred to his company as a set of loafers and slouches who didn't know enough to wear their uniforms properly. They were a bump-backed and lop-shouldered lot; they were lazy and shiftless; they needed a strong hand to freshen them up. He had the hand. He would teach them what discipline was and what soldiering meant, and any silliness or hanging back would be promptly punished.

Then began something akin to a reign of terror for the seventy men of Company B. Although nearly all were veterans, they drilled from morning till night. Certain privileges enjoyed when stationed at posts in time of peace were abolished. New rules were made and enforced regarding this and that, and in a fortnight the men felt like a lot of convicts. Cursing was a part of the new regime. Captain Trent was down under the heading of "Officer and Gentleman," and yet he was shockingly profane and shamelessly abusive. More punishment was inflicted in a month than for two years before; more desertions took place within three months than had been recorded for three years. It was generally understood that the "old man"—meaning the commander of the post—didn't appreciate Captain Trent's zeal and that he was not supported by his fellow officers in his bullying, but he went ahead on his own lines just the same.

There was enough to make the men sullen and vengeful, and the captain kept adding to it. He "broke" two sergeants and three corporals and at length, as a sort of climax, preferred charges against his orderly sergeant and had him suspended from duty while awaiting court martial. The state of affairs in Company B was simply lamentable when Miss Blanche Taylor and her mother arrived at a nearby ranch owned by a son and brother. If Miss Blanche was not positively engaged to Captain Trent they had known each other for two years, and there had been correspondence of a very friendly nature. The arrival benefited Company B in a way—that is, it took the captain away from the post much of his time and turned his thoughts into other channels. His lieutenants were neither martinet nor bulldozers.

It became the captain's custom after a few days to ride over to the ranch every morning to take a long gallop with Miss Blanche. On such occasions he was attended by a private soldier acting as orderly. It had been Private O'Rourke up to a certain Tuesday morning. Then Private Higgins humbly followed at the regulation distance without the change being noticed. Private Higgins had been Sergeant Higgins for two years before the coming of Captain Trent. Then came the change. On this morning the girl was ready and waiting, and she and the captain rode straight away and did not draw rein until reaching the boiling spring among the hills. Then they dismounted for a rest, and Higgins came forward to take care of their horses. Even then the captain did not remark the change. It was fifteen minutes later, as he sat with his back to a rock and smoking a cigar, that Private Higgins suddenly appeared before him with leveled revolver and quietly said:

"Captain Trent, I have a bit of business with you, and if you raise any row about it I'll shoot you through the head."

"Is it you, Higgins?" asked the officer as he turned.

"It's me, sir, one of the men you broke. I acted as orderly today that I might kill you. Give me the slightest excuse and I'll do it. You have your revolver, but it is not loaded. I tampered a bit with your man last night. Now put your hands behind you or this little lady, who is keeping so quiet, will see a case of killing."

Captain Trent was no coward, but he knew when he was beaten. When his arms were thrust behind him they were made fast with buckskin thongs brought for the purpose. Then his ankles were bound, and Private Higgins lighted a cigar and sat down and said to the girl, who had been so surprised and frightened that she had not said a word:

"Beg your pardon, miss, but there is naught for you to fear. You see, Captain Trent and I are both military reformists, only we go about it in a different way."

"But you don't mean to kill him!" exclaimed the girl as she clasped her hands.

"I hope I shan't have to, miss, being I've got him fast bound. I think it will be sufficient if I tell you what sort of a man he is and he does the listening. Just hear me, miss."

"Higgins, I'll have you shot for this!" threatened the captain as he began to realize the position he was placed in.

"You never will, captain," quietly replied the man. "In the first place, I may think best to shoot you before I go, and in the next I'm going to desert and bid you find me if you can. Keep a quiet tongue and don't provoke me. I've felt like murdering you for the last two months. Now for my story, miss."

The girl listened. She knew nothing of military matters. She had never heard of bulldozing and bullyragging and official spite. Private Higgins took up case after case and related incident after incident. Not understanding the nature of things, his relation would not have made such an impression upon the girl but for the captain's attitude before her. He quite lost his temper and became profane, abusive and coarse to a degree. He showed a side of his nature that she had never suspected and that shocked and astonished her. Private Higgins stated his case from beginning to end, and he stated it fairly and wound up by saying:

"You see, miss, that it is a case of military reform. Captain Trent felt called upon to reform Company B, and I felt called upon to reform him. I've got to desert and become an outlaw to do it, and I'm thinking I might as well go the whole way and leave him dead behind me."

"But you won't do that," she pleaded. "You may have been wronged, but you won't do murder?"

"Then it's owing to your own sweet self, young lady, but God help you if you ever become the wife of such a man. I'll go without harming him, and I'll say goodbye and heaven bless you."

He rode away without a look back, and when the echo of his horse's footsteps had died away the captain said:

"Blanche, the man is a scoundrel and a liar. He told you nothing but lies. You surely can't believe him."

She rose up and passed behind him and untied the knots at his wrists. With his freed hands he loosened those at his ankles and rose up and said:

"Blanche, tell me that you don't believe what he said. Tell me!"

"Go and resign," she interrupted him as she turned away to mount her horse and ride back to the ranch alone.

MARCIA'S ORDEAL

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

Marcia came up the walk with a sigh of relief so intense it was almost a sob. All afternoon she had been braving it out, forcing herself to smile and chatter dutifully, listen respectfully to Calverley's strictures upon the world—her world—and life in general and make the requisite automatic responses.

Aunt Calverley was no blood kin, only her father's stepmother, but all the more punctilious and difficult because of it. Twice a year she came in state to spend the night and day after at Greenways. The visits always left Marcia and her mother uncomfortable, but this was the first whose legacy had been true heartache.

"Don't look so, daughter. I don't believe it," Mrs. Alston said, drawing Marcia down beside her upon the piazza bench. "She was small and fair and blue eyed, all unlike her daughter. Even Aunt Calverley admitted grudgingly that Marcia was Alston through and through. That meant she was beautiful."

"As handsome as an Alston" had been a saying of the countryside this hundred years. As a race the Alstons were slim and supple, dark eyed, dark browned, with fine olive skin and clear, healthy scarlet showing richly in lips and cheeks; light stepping too. Marcia in especial had the motion of a flower swaying in gentle breezes. There had been something of natural irritation, but no surprise whatever, when Ivor Morris fell in love with her at first sight.

There could be no doubt of it. He called the very next day and the next and the next, then upon the fourth, planned a picnic in the grounds of High Brook, his ancestral estate. He was but newly come to it. The big house had been shuttered and shrouded almost twenty years. That was his excuse for asking his new friends to make merry with him outdoors. Though he was far too well bred to devote himself conspicuously to Marcia when thus playing host, by a sort of tacit consent she was pushed forward to be the head and front of everything. The next day he vanished unaccountably, but in a week he was back again and evidently more in love than ever. He managed somehow to see Marcia every day for a month; then came another absence and in the midst of it Aunt Calverley.

Aunt Calverley was bursting with news. Mrs. Alston was certain of it the minute she set eyes on her. There was a certain swelling as of pride in her own discerning mixed with ostentatious pity for the blindness of her kinsfolk. Still she told nothing out of the common until after the midday dinner, when she had begun veering delicately to the subject of her departing. Although the length of her visit was always as fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians, she felt sadly slighted if in the last hours of it she was not begged to make it longer.

Mrs. Alston had just said, with a commendable show of heartiness, "I'm sure there's nothing to call you home—you had just as well stay with us until Monday," when the revelation came.

"I hope I shan't never be foolish enough to wear out my welcome anywhere," Aunt Calverley returned viciously. "I know you two will be wanting to go right off and see your new neighbors. Of course you know Ivor Morris is fetching home his wife and twins. Don't tell me you hadn't heard? And him here so much! Well, I am astonished. But men air queer—specially the Morris men. How else did the old major have six sons and just this one grandson? And Ivor's father was the wildest of the lot. Maybe that's why I mistrusted his son so from the very first. You won't make me believe he's bringing the wife of his own good will and pleasure. I believe there's been trouble between 'em, and she's brought the gentleman up with a round turn. How do I know? You know he has got Peggy Henderson to keep house for him. On the way here I stopped at High Brook to ask Peggy if she reckoned I could get her daughter Fanny to come and quilt for me next fall. Peggy was so flustered I couldn't hardly get a sensible word out of her. I've had sent her a telegraph: 'Comin' home Saturday. Prepare adjoining rooms for Mrs. Morris and twin children.'"

"Why didn't you tell us yesterday? I would love to have made a cake for those children. Peggy Henderson's cake is always as heavy as she is," Marcia interrupted so early her mother gave her a look of adoring pride. "Now it's too late," Marcia ran on. "Do stay over Sunday. Aunt Calverley. The Morris will surely come to church. I'd like to know what you think of."

But there was no bearing Aunt Calverley away from tail of Ivor Morris. His sins, actual and potential, beguiled her into staying until sundown, although she had to drive ten miles.

Marcia endured it all wonderfully—just how she never quite understood. She did not break down even at her mother's wistful comforting—only looked her fingers hard and said, gazing far away into the glowing sunset: "Why shouldn't it be true, mamsie? Ivor Morris has looked love at me and spoken it, but never a word of marriage!"

"He—be—called me mother the very last time I saw him," Mrs. Alston said tremulously. "I—be—you he is not wicked!"

"No; perhaps not wicked," Marcia said, drawing her father within her arms. "He worships me, and I am truly very pretty, mother. He is impulsive too. I know for the time he loves me with all his heart. Maybe he has loved his—I mean somebody else—with all his heart. Maybe also he will keep on doing it all his life. And I love him, mother. But he has saved and spared me this much—he has never given me the chance to tell him so. Now I know why. Let us both be grateful and show it by helping to make things easy for him. People will gossip wildly over this unheard-of wife. We must pretend to have been in the secret."

"Can you do it? Are you strong enough?" Mrs. Alston said, drawing Marcia's head within the hollow of her arm.

Marcia nestled closer and said clearly: "I must be strong enough, mamsie. You must be strong enough. We will begin by going to church tomorrow. That will be the hardest thing. Oh, how I dread facing all those curious eyes!"

"No more than we do. Therefore all of us must stay away," Ivor Morris said, coming around the corner of the piazza. Madeira vines grew so rank there they hid everything. Ivor's eyes danced a bit, but his mouth was grave and even set. He half led, half dragged, a very pretty woman, whom he seated unceremoniously beside Mrs. Alston. "We walked across the woods, Melaine and I, on purpose to ask your good offices. Melaine is Mrs. Morris, but not my wife. That honor belongs to my cousin Graham, who didn't know he was a Morris until six weeks back. It seems his mother, when very young, married privately my wild Uncle Royal, disagreed with him and ran away from him before Graham was born. The day after she left Uncle Roy broke his neck in the hunt, but it was months before his widow knew it. When she did know she married an old lover, who adopted her son and brought him up as his own. I am, it seems, very like my uncle. When she saw me the first time, just after I came here, she broke down and told me the whole story. She did not know how much of the Morris fortune was entailed or that in proving Graham the eldest heir male I was half beggarly myself. All that has, however, settled itself. Graham is a trump. He will take over High Brook on account of the twins. Still I'm not so bad a match I don't dare ask Marcia to marry me. I've been on the point of doing it fifty times at least. But who could be brutal enough to ask a princess to exist on nothing a year?"

"Don't scold him, please. I have done that already," Melaine entreated prettily, holding Marcia's hand. Marcia stood very straight and asked severely, trying to frown on Ivor as she spoke: "How long had you been behind those vines? Did you dare eavesdrop?"

"Certainly. I love to confound provokers," Ivor said audaciously. "Listeners do sometimes hear good of themselves. But I know it was wrong. I'll do any penance you may set me after!"

"After what?" Marcia asked as he stopped tentatively, his eyes entreating.

"After the wedding day, sweetest," he said. "Then, heedless of others present, he took her in his arms."

Wiles of the Medicine Man.

Here is a brief account of the wiles of the southwestern medicine man as described in George Wharton James' story, "The Indians of the Painted Desert Region."

The ways of the Havasupai medicine men are similar to those of fakirs in all lands and ages. I have seen Rock Jones after examining a patient jump up and excitedly exclaim: "I can see into your head and all through your brains, down your throat and into your stomach, through your kidneys, bladder, intestines, and you are sick, very sick, very heap sick. But I am a good medicine man. I can cure you sure; I can cure you quick. But you must promise to give me $5. Don't forget I must have $5."

In one case with which I was familiar the medicine man declared that the heart of one sick man had gone away to the topmost peak of one of the canyon walls. It would cost several dollars to charm it back, but he could do it. Yielding to the pleadings of the man without the heart, he began to exercise his charms and incantations, and the next day he came in and declared he had seen it return during the early morning hours and his patient would recover. His prognostication was correct. The man was soon well and strong and paid his six dollar fee for having his heart returned to him with due gratitude and thankfulness.

THE A. A. Griggs COMPANY

WEDDING

IN WHICH BRIDE AND GROOM WERE BOTH GIRLS.

Party Consisted of Young Ladies Only But Half the Number Were in Full Evening Dress

Misses Romaine Moriarty and Helen Allen delightfully entertained a number of friends Monday evening in honor of Miss Mayme Tonge, who is to be one of the holiday brides.

The party consisted of young ladies only, but one-half the number were attired in full evening dress, and they acted as the gentlemen escorts, and did the honor very gracefully.

The principal feature of the evening's amusement was a mock marriage in which the supposed gentlemen were prominent figures.

The bride, Miss Mayme Tonge, was very pretty in a gown of white, and wore a bridal veil of tulle, caught with white roses. Miss Moriarty acted as bridegroom. Miss Cora Schimpf, the bridesmaid, was pretty in a gown of pink, and Miss Lillian Tonge was "best man."

Promptly at 8 o'clock the Ellington orchestra played the wedding march, and the bridal party descended the stairs, led by Rev. Bess Stater, who performed the ceremony. The ring ceremony was used and little Leah Moriarty carried the ring.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served, and Misses Helen Allen and Marie Bashur, acting as ushers escorted the guests to the dining room.

It was a scene of much merriment when the bride's cake was cut, each young lady being anxious to secure the mystic piece which contained the ring. Miss Tonge was the lucky one.

After the supper the guests spent the rest of the evening in dancing.

Miss Tonge received many useful and beautiful presents, linen and china predominating. The entertainment was a complete success throughout, and will be remembered by those present in years to come.

SLOWLY

Members of Krebs Household are Recovering From the Effects of Ptomaine Poisoning.

The condition of the members of the family of Charles Krebs, of West Church street, is about the same today, all of them slowly recovering. Although still quite ill, there is no apprehension but that the danger point is past.

Mr. and Mrs. Krebs, Louis Krebs, Oscar Fankhauser and Miss Bessie Dernberger were poisoned by eating canned salmon Saturday night last.
